Call for Papers:

“Virtual Exchange in a Changing World: Innovation and Inclusion”

An International Research Conference organised by UNICollaboration

CYPRUS UNIVERSITY OF TECHNOLOGY

LIMASSOL, CYPRUS

4-5 JUNE 2026

Focus and Topics:

The UNICollaboration organisation is organising an international research conference on the theme of “Virtual Exchange in a Changing World: Innovation and Inclusion”. Our 2026 theme acknowledges the transformative power of digital connectivity and collaborative learning in times of global complexity. As education continues to evolve amidst socio-political shifts, environmental challenges, and technological acceleration, virtual exchange stands as a uniquely positioned practice to foster intercultural dialogue, international collaboration, and equitable access to learning opportunities. This conference brings together researchers, educators, teacher trainers, policy makers, and students across disciplines to explore the dynamic potential of VE to shape more inclusive and innovative learning environments.

The conference will serve as a venue for all models of virtual exchange, including COIL and telecollaboration, exploring a wide range of topics including, but not limited to, the following:

- Innovative models and best practices in designing VE projects
- Intercultural competence development through VE
- Curriculum integration and accreditation of VE within degree programs
- Assessment of learning outcomes in VE projects
- Institutional strategies for scaling and sustaining VE initiatives
- Equity, accessibility, and inclusion in VE initiatives
- The role of VE in advancing internationalization at home (IaH)
- Case studies of successful VE partnerships in diverse academic fields

Student voices and experiences in VE programs
Integrating AI, VR/AR, and other emerging technologies in VE
Innovative research methodologies for studying VE impact
The role of VE in promoting global citizenship and social responsibility
The intersection of VE and Blended Mobility programs (BIPs, etc.)
VE as a response to global crises, conflict, or isolation
Interdisciplinary and transdisciplinary VE collaborations in formal and informal educational settings, including Higher Education

Keynote Speakers:

Anthony Liddicoat

Anthony J. Liddicoat is Professor in Applied Linguistics at the University of Warwick and Adjunct Professor in Justice and Society at the University of South Australia. His research interests include language and intercultural issues in education, language policy and planning. He is a Fellow of the UK Academy of Social Sciences, the Executive Editor of Current Issues in Language Planning and Co-editor of the book series Language and Intercultural Communication in Education (Multilingual Matters).

Laia Canals

Laia Canals holds an Associate position at the Universitat Oberta de Catalunya. Her research addresses technology enhanced task-based language learning, development of L2 through interaction in collaborative tasks in computer-mediated communication settings, the development of intercultural communicative competence, the development of digital skills and online language teacher education.

Submissions:The conference will welcome abstracts for:

- Research Papers: empirical or theoretical studies on Virtual Exchange.
- VE Practical Reports: reflective accounts of VE implementations, including challenges and lessons learned.
- Project Reports: outcomes and experiences from funded or institutional VE projects.
- Workshops: interactive sessions focused on skill building, tools, pedagogical strategies.
- Panel Discussions: thematic panels led by a chair bringing together diverse perspectives on key VE issues. Panel organizer(s) should outline the panel's central theme and include the names of all participants, along with the titles and abstracts of their individual presentations. Panels should consist of 4 to 8 speakers.
- Posters: visual presentations of ongoing or completed VE initiatives.

UNICollaboration 2026 Conference will be held in person only. We welcome submissions for the following presentation formats:
